

Sergio Chiericoni is ERG's New Chief Business Development Officer

Sergio Chiericoni is the new Chief Business Development Officer for the ERG Group. An engineer with twenty years of experience serving in top management positions of international companies in the Energy sector, he joined ERG's top management today as the Chief Business Development Officer.

Sergio Chiericoni has led major development, design and construction projects in several countries throughout the world, focusing on Renewable Energies in the last ten years.

He has served as the Vice President – Engineering Onshore Facilities of the Technip Group and subsequently as Director – Process and Engineering in ICQ Holding, where he started to work on development in the Renewable Energies sector; he then joined Sunpower Corporation, where he led key business development projects in EMEA (Europe Middle East and Africa) and APAC (Asia – Pacific).

He was the CEO of Falck Renewables Wind Ltd, and in the Falck Group he also served as Head of Business Development, Engineering & Construction and subsequently as North Europe Area Manager.

This significant addition confirms ERG's strategy of imparting additional momentum to business development activities.

The position, which reports directly to the Chief Executive Officer, has been filled by a manager with long, proven experience in the implementation of strategic projects in the energy sector on an international scale.
