

ERG moves up CDP ranking of global leaders in energy-saving practices

ERG was rated “A-” in the Climate Change programme promoted by the Carbon Disclosure Project (CDP), the international non-profit organisation leading companies and governments towards reduced greenhouse gas emissions, the safeguarding of water resources and forest protection.

This is an important recognition of the actions and strategies put in place by ERG to combat climate change, together with its disclosure transparency. This result also confirms the constant commitment towards a sustainable growth model that combines economic performance with a reduction in CO2 emissions. Its positioning as a green business, a leader in the generation of electricity from renewable sources, in fact enables ERG to actively contribute to the economy’s progressive decarbonisation, in keeping with the outcomes from COP 21, endorsed by the Paris Agreement, which view the development of renewable energy as a fundamental element in the fight against climate change

We mention that a year ago CDP, in collaboration with Borsa Italiana, assigned to ERG the 2016 Award for Best Newcomer Italy with a newcomer evaluation of “B” of its ranking scale.
